LB Steak, a modern American Steakhouse, is led by two culinary titans: James Beard nominee and owner of San Francisco's renowned La Folie, Roland Passot, and fellow French Master Chef, Joel Guillon. In addition to LB Steak, Passot and Guillon oversee the three Left Bank Brasseries throughout the Bay Area. Chef de Cuisine Ryan Ellison executes LB Steak signature dishes such as the 20-oz. Porterhouse with Traditional Béarnaise Sauce and the Rossini Foie Gras Burger, as well as a wide selection of fresh seafood, chops, salads and side dishes. The wine list features an array of domestic and imported wines, as well as an extensive selection of wines by the glass, offering diners options to fit any taste or budget. We look forward to serving you soon! - LB Steak

Gayot Review

The menu at this upscale steakhouse has less of a French accent than one would expect from owner Roland Passot and the team behind the Left Bank family of French bistros. The selection of chic comfort food is appealing, if slightly familiar, and more New American than old French. Style-wise, the dining room delivers, its mahogany-tinged décor lightened by delicate chandeliers and edgy artworks, while the kitchen's innovative sliding glass doors add contrast and a touch of drama to the sophisticated ambience. Executive chef Chris Joslyn's flavors are well balanced in dishes such as a salad of heirloom tomatoes, the meaty slices set atop a zesty avocado cream and sweetened with a sherry vinaigrette. A succulent pork belly appetizer is brimming with Franco-American flavors: the sweet anise of fennel (French) and the tang of barbecue sauce (American); and the fattiness of the pork is tempered well with a peppery watercress and herb salad. The concentrated flavors of fresh basil pistou served with slow-roasted sea bass up the character of the dish, though it's not particularly memorable. A standout on the prime steak menu is a rib-eye on the bone for two (dubbed a Tomahawk chop), displayed tableside before being cooked to order. Attentive and knowledgeable servers will help even the most well-informed oenophiles with selections from the well-chosen wine list.

The Situation

Move over, Rice-a-Roni. The real San Francisco treat is sourdough. But there’s no need to mingle with the tourists at the Wharf – once you know how to bake the real stuff yourself, there’s no going back. Learning to make your own sourdough bagels with Sour Flour founder Danny Gabriner is the best thing since, well, sliced bread.

The Lowdown

Think you’ve had the best bagels this city has to offer? Think again. The best bagels are ones you’ve lovingly baked yourself, using sourdough made from organic ingredients. Intimidated by the thought of making your own bread from scratch? There’s no need to be. True, sourdough can be tricky, requiring just the right starter, temperature and technique. But a class with the passionate, patient and knowledgeable Danny Gabriner, founder of Sour Flour, will give you the skills and confidence to bake bagels at home yourself. As anyone who’s ever baked before knows, baking is both an art and a science. Danny will help you master both subjects, teaching you techniques like mixing, shaping and baking the bagels. You’ll start by mixing together the
